Maritime Museum

Centuries of exploitation and climate change threaten the quality of Vermont waters and, even our way of life. Imagine Vermont with streams, rivers, and lakes all swimmable, fishable, and drinkable. But due to algae blooms and other issues some of these activities have to be curtailed. But we can work together to fix this. Come to an event to enjoy the water, learn, meet other water lovers and grow as lake advocates. Recognizing that water is the Creator's gift to us, and that without it life is not possible, people of all faith communities understand that we are obligated to speak out, to advocate for just solutions.

This event will encourage participants from diverse faith communities to advocate for the Lake Champlain Watershed at the town, county and state level. Senator Chris Bray,, expert on the issues, will address the problems and potential solutions regarding the value, health and repair of the watershed and all of Vermont's waters.
